

PATHMAT™

Overview

Pathmat is a geotextile fabric made of polypropylene fibers. It is used for erosion control, weed control, and as a temporary surface for construction sites. It is available in various colors and weights.

Pathmat is a geotextile fabric made of polypropylene fibers. It is used for erosion control, weed control, and as a temporary surface for construction sites. It is available in various colors and weights.

- Pathmat is a geotextile fabric made of polypropylene fibers. It is used for erosion control, weed control, and as a temporary surface for construction sites. It is available in various colors and weights.

- Pathmat is a geotextile fabric made of polypropylene fibers. It is used for erosion control, weed control, and as a temporary surface for construction sites. It is available in various colors and weights.

